

The Night Worker

Protective-services fiction by Craig S. Thurmond, MSW

Follow J.C. Borum through family loyalty, institutional pressure, and the consequences of professional judgment. Read the series in the order shown below.

READING ORDER 01

The Weight of Small Things

A raw protective-services novel about trauma, survival, professional judgment, and the cases that follow a worker home.

READING ORDER 02

Sins of the Father — Volume One

J.C. Borum follows the small details into a case shaped by family loyalty, reputation, institutional pressure, and carefully managed explanations.

READING ORDER 03

Sins of the Father — Volume Two

The investigation reaches deeper into power, county politics, silence, and the cost of refusing the story that makes everyone comfortable.

READING ORDER 04

Those Who Refuse to See — Volume One

A boy hidden behind a pantry door. An older woman trapped in her own home. A teenage girl carrying a mother's responsibilities. J.C. Borum confronts three households where fear, bias, and institutional hesitation keep suffering out of sight.

READING ORDER 05

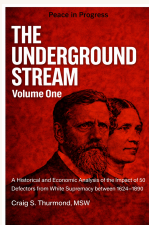

Those Who Refuse to See — Volume Two

J.C. Borum faces threats, court pressure, and the difficult work that comes after intervention. As the Bellamy, Harrell, and Price cases continue, he must protect vulnerable people without letting the work consume his own life.

Nine commitments for protecting Black life, preserving memory, strengthening community, and building durable freedom.

Coordinated therapeutic resources

My Light Shines Bright (girls) and I Am Proud of Who I Am (boys) support African American children ages 5–9 and the adults supporting them. Each series pairs a therapist guide with a caregiver guide and a coloring/activity book.

Free caregiver guides and activity PDFs are available at peaceinprogressmedia.com/resources. They support coordinated use of the professional guide.
